FUND COMMENTARY

May was again a strong month for equity markets, as outstanding earnings from technology companies sustained enthusiasm for the AI trade throughout the month. There is currently an acute shortage of many types of semiconductor given the strong level of demand for AI chips. South Korean semiconductor companies delivered particularly strong results; while the US market and the Japanese market, which has a number of interesting automation companies, were also strong.

Oil prices have fallen 20% from their end of April peak, driven by growing market confidence that the conflict in Iran can be resolved and that Iranian supply can gradually return to market. Higher energy prices have already begun to weigh on global growth, particularly in emerging markets which are heavily dependent on energy imports.

The best performers in the Fund in May were companies which serve the semiconductor industry. Cadence Design Systems is a leading semiconductor designer, while ASML is the leading equipment provider. Both companies are well placed to benefit from spend by an industry which has grown much larger to provide the computing power for AI. Safran and GE Aerospace, our jet engine manufacturers, rebounded well as sentiment improved over the Iran war and expectations of global travel volumes recovered.

Detractors from performance in May included Netflix, which is currently absorbing higher content creation costs. Its new advertising tier is however expanding well, with 60% new subscribers choosing an ad-supported plan where available. Stryker, the medical device manufacturer, was also weak following an earlier cyberattack. Operational disruption does appear to have been quickly contained.

During the month we added a new name to the Fund, KLA, which has high market share in process control and yield management systems within the semiconductor industry. We also brought Keyence, the Japanese leader in factory automation, back into the Fund after its results showed that it is starting to benefit from AI-related automation. It has also taken new steps towards a more shareholder-friendly balance sheet policy. We exited Visa and Accenture to fund these purchases. We still very much like Visa's business model but have exposure already through our holding in Mastercard. We are no longer convinced that Accenture will be a beneficiary of AI deployment.

The value may go up as well as down and past performance is not necessarily a guide to future performance. CIS's are traded at the ruling price and can engage in scrip lending and borrowing. A schedule of fees, charges and maximum commissions is available on request from the Manager. There is no guarantee in respect of capital or returns in a portfolio. A CIS may be closed to new investors in order for it to be managed more efficiently in accordance with its mandate.
